Towns Along Way To Lac La Biche May Soon Be Users Of Natural Gas

By Martha Fraser

Towns along the way from Lac la Biche to Edmonton may look forward to the installations of natural gas in the near future. This will give a new lift to these northeastern towns, which have somehow been left out in the enjoyment of this modern commodity so far.

The Northern Alberta Pipe Lines will run a trunk line from Lac la Biche into the Edmonton area and gas producing companies in the immediate district will put in gas gathering systems to connect with the trunk line. This will mean a great deal to the people living en route. It means that at long last these residents will enjoy the benefits of natural gas the same as many other districts have had for some time.

New developments in the Lac la Biche field will come in 1960. Sage Oil Co. Ltd have taken out further reservations on some 40,000 acres in Townships 68, 69 and 70, Ranges 13 and 14, west of the fourth Meredian. This area is across the lake north of the town. In short, this holding comprises some 62½ sections of land, which lies 12 miles out.

The company has at the present time four wells east of the town of Lac la Biche. Work on the drilling in the new field will commence durin the coming summer.

The Sage Oil Co. Ltd is an all Canadian company, incorporated in Alberta in 1951, and has 27 producing oil wells in the Leduc area. These wells produce in the volume of 14,000 barrels daily. In addition the company has various other holdings throughout the province.

Auctions Of Furs Attract Buyers

Buyers from fur salons in London, Paris, Italy, New York, Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg attend the fur auction sales held at several Canadian points, including Edmonton, periodically.

Recently more than 144,000 pelts were offered at such a sale held in Edmonton, returning some $155,000 to the industry.

Mink ranchers, traders, trappers and country buyers consign lots of furs to fur brokerage firms for sale on a commission basis. Buyers are given a presale opportunity to view the pelts, thus helping assure top market prices to the producer. All pelts to be offered for sale are arranged according to lot and catalogued. They are then sold to the highest bidder . . . unless the bid is lower than broker's estimated price, or the reserve bid placed on the lot by the producer.

These auctions usually reflect possible coming changes in milady's fur tastes. The popular buying of new breeds and types of various furbearing animals is noted along with other information pertinent to the fur industry.

Statements Said Cause Of Much Misunderstanding

By T. W. Pue

Consistent failure or refusal of the Edmonton Journal to report the known facts is causing a lot of misunderstanding about the proposed law on Industrial Taxation," said Hon. A. J. Hooke this week.

"There are two statements that the daily paper persists in making," said the minister for municipal affairs, "which the editors of the paper know are not true. We have repeatedly pointed out to them the actual facts which they continue to ignore or twist to suit their own kind of news reporting," Mr. Hooke continued.

"One of these has to do with what the Journal calls a suggested "tax Pool". They imply that the government plans to collect all the taxes from all the industries, put it in a central fund and then distribute it to municipalities in the province according to a certain formula to be devised.

"Nothing could be further from the truth," according to Mr. Hooke. "The plain fact is that there are certain regions like the Edmonton district that has special tax problems due to recent industrial development."

The minister went on to explain that in an area such as that of the Edmonton district, each municipality would retain to itself 30% of its industrial tax revenue. The commission to be established to administer the tax-sharing plan would take the remaining 70% from each municipality and distribute it from a pool to all municipalities in the area serving the industries involved, or their employees.

Mr. Hooke pointed to another argument of the Edmonton Journal. This is that the government is going to use the proposed Industrial Tax as a substitute for amalgamation of adjoining municipalities in the Edmonton area.

"The McNally Commission suggested further study of the Industrial Tax idea and ever since the report of the commission came out we have been studying it closely and our proposed legislation is the result of this study," said the minister.

"But that doesn't stop the amalgamation of any municipalities in the Edmonton area or elsewhere in Alberta," he concluded. "Special legislation was put on the statute books two years ago to facilitate amalgamation of any municipalities desiring it."

Maccagno Tosses Bouquet to SC Treasurer, Talks On Education

Members of the Alberta legislature were told by Education Minister Aalborg that many of the recommendations of the Cameron commission will be implemented in modified form. Mr. Aalborg made the statement as members got down to business examining the record 328-million dollar budget presented by Provincial Treasurer Hinman Friday night.

Leading off today's debate was Liberal Mike Maccagno of Lac la Biche. He stated that the government's proposed legislation to take over taxation of industries from municipalities shouldn't be so broad that it would enable the government to tax any industry it wishes by simply passing an order-in-council.

He said legislation should spell out the industries to be affected and make clear that the list cannot be changed without the consent of he legislature. He said it is very important to municipalities to know exactly where they stand.

Mr. Maccagno departed from the traditional no-confidence stand taken by the opposition leader and congratulated the provincial treasurer on what he called a masterful job. But Mr. Maccagno said his admiration does not mean that he agrees with everything in the budget and suggested there may be room for a little more efficiency & economy in the government's operations.

Mr. Maccagno urged government assistance to municipalities which wish to provide their own gas and other utilities because the cities and towns can use these utilities to relieve the tax burden.

Mr. Maccagno said he was not suggesting we should interfere with free competitive private enterprise but the publicly-operated utilities will provide the yardstick that will enable the Public Utility Board to accurately determine what actually is a fair rate of return and at the same time will provide competition to a monopoly.

NO HELP FOR METIS

Mr. Maccagno said he was sorry to see no provision in the budget for assistance to the three thousand Metis and five thousand Indians of the north and he pointed out that his constituency is the only one in the province without a hard-surfaced highway.

The minister of education, Anders A. Aalborg, said considerable study has been given to the recommendations of the Cameron commission but he did not commit the government to implementing any of the commission's proposals.

Mr. Aalborg said the commission's recommendation for accrediting schools would mean even more local control of schools. He said this is a very important recommendation and will be given serious consideration. He said when a school meets certain standards it would be given more freedom regarding courses of studies and examinations. One the accreditation system is established, he said, non-accredited school would likely have their students writing grade ten and eleven examinations.

THE Homemaker

By BERTHA M. McCUTCHEON

The home sewer choosing a spool of thread today must look at more than the color. Just as fabrics have changed with the coming of man-made fibres, sewing thread have been keeping up with the time.

Cotton thread, the long-time favorite for most home sewing, is still best for cotton or linen fibres. But since home dressmakers are now using more and more fabrics of synthetic fibres and their blends, manufacturers B. McCutcheon have developed new thread to stitch these new materials.

It is important that the sewing thread used in a garment should have the same characteristics as the fabric itself. There's no use making a dress in a shrink-resistant fabric if the thread shrinks. As soon as the dress is washed, the seams will pucker! And it is foolish to sew a long-wearing material with a thread which is not every bit as strong. The seams will give way long before the fabric is worn out.

The thread most favored for synthetics is one made of "Terylene." It is exceedingly strong and at the same time it stretches very little. If a thread behaves like elastic as it passes through the sewing machine, it springs back to its original length as soon as the tension is released. This makes an ugly puckered seam.

When sewing with "Terylene" thread, the same machine tension as used for cotton should be satisfactory. If not, loosen both the needle and bobbin tension slightly. Use a new, sharp needle, one without an roughness either at the tip or in the eye. A jagged bit of metal will break the fine fibres and cause the thread to fray as it passes through the needle. Since this type of thread is a bit slippery, knots may not hold, so the seams should be back-stitched at the beginning and the end.

When sewing by hand, use a fairly short piece of thread to keep it from becoming tangled. And always cut "Terylene" thread with scissors — it's too strong to make a clean break.

For wash and wear performance, the thread which holds clothes together is just as important as the fabric itself. If the thread shrinks, the seams pucker and an otherwise immaculate garment looks messy. It's such a small thing — the spool on the sewing machine — but without the right thread the new man-made fibres cannot possibly live up to their reputation for long wear and easy care.

Government Help For Farmers Urged By Liberal Member Mike Maccagno

Mike Maccagno the Liberal member of the provincial legislature for Lac La Biche last week urged the provincial government to assist Alberta farmers whose crops were hit by early snow and who would have difficulty in securing seed for next year's crop.

Speaking in the throne speech debate he said the federal provincial assistance to farmers was "insufficient" and that those who need it most will not receive it. He pointed out that many farmers who were able to take off a large percentage of their grain now find it moulding in their barns because it was damp and the situation is much worse when it is considered that farmers will not have seed to sow this year.

He urged the minister of agriculture to provide seed at reasonable prices to assist the farmer in his present predicament.

The Liberal party's legislative representative voiced concern that planning for administration of senior citizens homes is not keeping pace with construction. He said the matter was of great urgency because many of the homes were now nearing completion and he wondered what efforts are being made by the government for the proper management of these homes.

Mr. Maccagno made a plea for the construction of market roads in north Alberta and suggested the provincial government give more active assistance and consideration to the plight north Alberta residents in this regard. He pointed out the government could be taking advantage of winter works assistance plans and the roads to resources program to start the construction of these much needed roads.

He also asked the government to consider granting travel allowance to farmers who are forced to pay the high cost of bringing veterans great distances to assist farmers in time of distress.

Turning to natural gas the Liberal member said he believed in private enterprise but that to be efficient it must have competition and at present there is no competition in the distribution of gas in the province to safeguard consumers from unnecessary increases.

Home And School Stresses Need For Full Time Recreational Director

LAC LA BICHE — L. J. Bartman, newly appointed president of the home and school association, was chairman at the regular meeting held February 26 in the Dr. Swift School. In the absence of the secretary Mrs. F. McMillan, Mrs. J. Booker was secretary pro tem.

The Lac la Biche citizen's band was in attendance and opened the meeting with O Canada, as well as playing several selections throughout the evening.

H. Lobay, convener of the program planning committee, brought before the meeting the purpose of the home and school association, stressing the fact that it is not a money-raising organization. It is, he stated, mainly to promote the welfare of the children, raise the standard of home life and foster co-operation between the parent and the teacher. This is accomplished by giving parents an understanding of the needs surrounding their child, and seeking to foster high ideals of citizenship and patriotism. Mr. Lobay said this was a big undertaking in this fast-moving world, and much thought and co-operation is needed.

The committee, he said, is seeking to work out one phase at a time, and desire to concentrate this year on improving the recreational facilities in the town. He went on to say that the district is favored to have such great potentialities such as a fine beach and lovely surroundings, but many improvements are needed to provide a safe playing area for the children. He stated that the greatest need seemed to be for a full-time supervisor at the beach by the Nanton Street dock for the summer months.

In the discussion period that followed some of the immediate needs cited were, a full-time swimming instructor, a roped off area in the lake for the small children, life-saving equipment, bath houses and playground equipment. All of these call for an extensive outlay of funds. A motion was passed to form a committee who would approach the town council and different service clubs in the town for assistance in bringing about these improvements. Several volunteered to form such a committee. They are: H. Lobay, chairman; E. Shanks, Mrs. S. Hamar, Mrs. D. Bouvier, L. J. Badry and Rene Rizzoli.

F. Creighton, leader of the band formed about a year ago, gave a short review of a band clinic recently held at Vegreville. He told of Jack Dobush, leader of the Vegreville band, who also directs six school bands in surrounding towns. He cited an instance of a band in a local town in which five grandmothers were active members. He told of the benefits of a band in publicizing a town, and the worthwhile training and enjoyment it can provide for young and old. Mr. Creighton acknowledged the fine co-operation and help of not only the members of the band itself but the newly formed band auxiliary and people of the town in general.

The attendance banner was again won by the Grade 9 room taught by Sister Mary. Two interesting films on water safety were shown by Mr. Rod Cherkas. Hospitality convener, Mrs. B. Romaniuk, assisted by several other ladies, served coffee and doughnuts to conclude the evening.

Helina

The Farmers' Union held a special meeting February 22 for a radio broadcast discussion. Lunch was served after the meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Jenkins of Peace River were visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Einar Huser.

Johnny Suhan received injuries in a collision between a school bus and his vehicle which was demolished. A passenger in his vehicle, Bill Lowe, was killed. Mr. and Mrs. John Suhan, George Suhan and Steve Onciul visited Johnny in the Athabasca Hospital.

Despite the cold weather the district farmers are getting their land cleared. Steve Onciul is bulldozing on William Onciul's farm and the William Hamilton outfit from Lac la Biche is working on the farm of William Noblock.

Steve Onciul flew out from Edmonton and returned to bring home a car which he purchased there.

Mrs. Roy Niblock is a patient in the Lac la Biche Hospital.

County System Said "Satisfactory"

Ask Co-Operation Ratepayers In Keeping Fires Under Good Control

An estimated number between 200 and 300 ratepayers and visitors gathered at the Community Centre, Athabasca, on Saturday, Feb. 20 to attend the first annual meeting of the County of Athabasca. George Hague was elected unanimously to serve as chairman and Walter Leskiw, as secretary. Eddie Alberta was named assistant chairman.

Since there was no annual meeting last year, the minutes were dispensed with and the secretary read the annual municipal inspector's report. Since it was difficult to hear without the loudspeaker, a motion was made to read it again when the speaker was fixed.

Chief of the criticism levelled by the inspector was that divisional boundaries should be forgotten when allocating public works funds, in accordance with the act. He approved of the manner in which the records were kept in the office.

Ed Parr, Val Breckenridge and Tod Richards were named to the resolutions committee.

A. Aloisio, chairman of the county, then gave his report. He explained that the report just read was one made annually by the department of municipal affairs. Much of the criticism was due to the use of motions in place of by-laws, for which the council accepted the criticism. The financial condition, he pointed out, is better than it was last year.

He said he had found the county system, both school and municipal bodies working together, had proved satisfactory. He said the county had stayed within the allocation for public works, indeed had spent $5,000 less than they could have.

He said Councillor Ed Loxam, chairman of the municipal committee, and Councillor Ed Parr, chairman of the school committee, would make their respective reports, and that he would be glad to answer questions.

A ratepayer suggested there were too many on the school committee, but Mr. Aloisio said they had cut down the administration costs of the two bodies the previous year, and said the present set-up seemed to be working well.

Councillor Loxam made one of the most comprehensive reports in regard to public works, which has been presented for a long time. He started out with a brief run-down of what had been accomplished. Since the county got away to a late start in the spring, not as much was done as should have been, he said, and there was still lots more to do.

The formation of the new county took time and preparation. They were late organizing the public works program. Then there was a bad break when the prevelance of fires held up the machinery. He asked the co-operation of the ratepayers to stop the fires when they were small this spring, and not let them burn till it took so much to stop them. The $7,000 spent on fires in 1959 would or could have been used on roads.

He spoke of the work done in levelling the site of the home for the aged. The land had been provided by the Town of Athabasca as its share, and the county had undertaken to level it to specifications of the department. He said they had moved between 20 and 23 thousand cubic yards of dirt. With pride he said he had been told that the site was counted as one of the finest in Alberta. He said completion date of the home was set for April.

He then gave a resume of the road work done. There was 61½ miles of road re-gravelled; 19½ gravelled; 52 miles graded or re-graded; 5 miles newly built; in the district roads 28 miles had been gravelled and 19¾ graded.

Considerable work had been done under the contingency grant where 2 miles of high grade had been built across the muskeg on the baseline west of Meanook, and had been graded and gravelled. This was done by county machinery, but was paid for by grant.

Also under the contingency grant were:

Boyle to Colinton had been graded and gravelled under contract;

The road north to Paxson had been cleared and 1½ miles graded;

The Newbrook to Rochester road, under contract had had considerable work done;

The Boyle to Caslan road, mainly in the L.I.D., had 4 miles of new road built in the county.

Under the winter works program, cost of which is shared 50-25-25% by the federal, provincial and municipal governments, respectively, the county is planning on spending a total of between 40 and 50 thousand dollars. County share of this will be in the neighborhood of 10 to 15 thousand dollars.

M. G. Gault, superintendent of schools, made his report, which was contained in essence, in the financial statement mailed to the ratepayers.

Ed Parr, chairman of the school committee, spoke briefly. He would attempt, he said, to fill in a few gaps left by the other reports. By the act, a county must have a school committee, he said. It is not compelled to have a municipal committee. He named the school committee members from districts beyond the boundaries of the county, but within the county school system. All the members were put on the school committee because it seemed better that way.

The mill rate for school purposes, he said, was the lowest in the province, 33 mills. He said the average teacher's salary was not low, it was $200 above the average for the province, but even so, over $2,500 had been spent in advertising for teachers. He gave a break-down of how the tax dollar was spent.

Grants, he said, almost cover the cost of bus operation.

He spoke of the formation of centralized boards in the area. Then he went on to explain the costs had risen because of the following increased services: lights, electric instead of gasoline; propane or gas for heat instead of coal, etc. He spoke of the bursary system, which brought the local students back as teachers in the area.

Field Supervisor Hans Armfelt reported for the Agricultural Service Board. His report is contained in the financial statement.

B. C. Hart, returning officer, declared nominations would be received for electoral divisions 2, 5 and 6, between the hours of 3:00 and 4:00. At the end of the alotted time, he announced the nominations: for division 2, E. A. Bretzlaff, Mike Krajacic; for division 5, Val Breckenridge, Nick Symyrozum; for division 6, Joe Shimonichek, who was declared elected. Another nominee appeared for this division, but was about five minutes late in filling his forms.

Election day is set for Saturday, March 19, from 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

A protest was registered in regard to the housing of the health unit. Chairman Aloisio said the county would endeavor to help to find suitable accommodation.

The resolutions committee made its report, Chairman Breckenridge acting as spokesman. There had been three, but one was withdrawn, and he reported on two.

Resolution No. 1 dealt with holding elections at large (the entire county voting) after candidates had been nominated in their own electoral divisions. It was defeated.

Resolution No. 2 dealt with hiring a supervisor of roads; to operate with not more than two or three outfits and to use two shifts as much as possible. After some discussion, this resolution was passed.

Member E. Loxam reported for the hospital board.

In the Middle East the basic refugee ration — flour, beans, sugar, rice, fats — amounts to 1,500 calories a day. The average Canadian consumes more than twice as much, about 3,050 calories.

Cameron Commission Report Studied By Alberta Teachers' Association

On February 12 the Lac la Biche ATA local held its meeting in Dr. Swift's school, Lac la Biche. This meeting was fairly well attended in spite of several teachers being on the sick list.

It was reported that the ATA curling bonspiel, which was held on a Saturday in the last part of January, was a success in spite of the fact that members of the bonspiel committee were hospitalized at the time. Thanks go to Miss Vicky Torrazan, the only member who took care of all the arrangements, for its success.

A circular regarding Banff conference advised that the Lac la Biche delegate will attend the curriculum planning session.

It was decided that the March meeting of the local will take the form of a social evening, a "meet your fellow teachers' family" project. The public relations committee is in charge of making all arrangements, including the announcement of the date. Watch for a circular.

The secretary, Sr. Mary, reported that all replies as to MSI were not returned. When it is found that 75% of the teachers of the division are in favor of this group insurance, registrations will commence.

An extremely enlightening and interesting report was given by a group of teachers from the Plamondon staff, after a month of study of both the majority and minority reports of the Cameron Commission on Education.

Mr. Girard reported the commission's findings and recommendations regarding academic achievements of Alberta students. Paul Piquette reported on two topics, due to the absence of another member of the panel. The topics he dealt with were Centralization of Schools, and separate schools and the teaching of French langhage in the Alberta schools. Sr. Christine discussed the commission's report on teacher training. The panel proved that the Cameron commission report on education is a document which is worth studying with care in this, which seems, the crucial time in Alberta's education system. It was also proven that such a lengthy, detailed document cannot be studied thoroughly and understood clearly in one session.

The panel's enthusiastic efforts proved so interesting there was no need for a game, before lunch, which was served by the elementary grade teachers of Lac la Biche school.

Watch for that social evening in March.

WHEN EVE WHITE saw the several pairs of shoes, the new coat, the luxurious new evening gowns, the nylon lingerie, she stepped back aghast.—Illustration from the 20th Century-Fox motion picture "The Three Faces of Eve".

THE THREE FACES OF EVE

By Corbett H. Thigpen, M.D., and Hervey M. Cleckley, M.D.

This is the second of 18 articles telling the story of one of the most remarkable cases of multiple personality in all medical history, told by the two doctors who treated the case. In the first instalment the doctors told how Eve White, a young housewife, came to see them, complaining of agonizing headaches and lengthy blackouts. Her husband reported that she occasionally showed peculiar changes of mood.

CHAPTER TWO

For almost a year the patient, Eve White, got along fairly well. She returned only two or three times to discuss relatively small problems. Then one day her husband called to say it was urgent that she return for help.

A quarrel had apparently caused deep disturbances in the marriage. While visiting a relative a bitter disagreement had developed. After a truly violent scene both husband and wife, in anger and with finality, announced the end of their relationship. Ralph White had then left at once for home where he waited for his wife.

When she came he was astonished at her smile, at the gentle tone of her voice. She kissed him lightly on the cheek, then casually began her routine household tasks as if no problem had arisen.

For several days the household was peaceful and relations between the two seemed at their best. Then one evening he found Eve packing her suitcase as if for a trip. She was calm, matter-of-fact, and smiling. Cautiously he asked why she was making these preparations.

SHE DIDN'T REMEMBER

"I'm getting ready to go and visit Flo," she told him. She seemed at a loss, wondering why he should ask her this. Before the recent trip that had terminated so strangely, they had often discussed the plan for Eve to spend several days with her cousin Flo who lived about 50 miles away in Columbia.

Ralph could not convince her that she had already paid the visit. She had not the slightest recollection of this or of the vehement altercation that had made her decide to leave him.

In the office she to'd the therapist that no awareness had come to her of the period Ralph said she had spent with Flo and her husband. This, he decided, was an impressive amnesia. What relation did such a manifestation have to the former blackouts which had been mentioned? Hypnosis was easily induced and, this state Eve found it possible to recall the visit to her cousin in considerable detail.

What she and the congenial cousin had done — shopping expeditions, going to the movies, playing canasta — became quite clear. And recollection of this was retained after she was awakened from hypnosis.

IN WONDERFUL SPIRITS

Flo and her husband, Jack, had witnessed the quarrel and later confirmed Ralph's account of his wife's participating in the fray with all the fury of a tigress.

Her host and hostess reported later that Eve had been in wonderful spirits during the visit, showing at times an actual gaiety and liveliness they had not seen in her for years. She seemed extremely energetic and had so many plans and engagements that she was seldom at the house.

Later, in the office Eve White expressed alarm about having suffered such a lapse of memory. She seemed to gain some reassurance in the explanation that unacceptable events are sometimes unconsciously repressed from memory or involuntarily dissociated from awareness.

She and her husband left the office in good spirits. Her period of amnesia, as far as could be determined, was now clear. She seemed free now of any intention or impulse to withdraw from her marriage.

A STRANGE LETTER

A number of days passed. Then came the following letter:

"Dear Doctor,

"Remembering my visit to —— brought me a great deal of relief, to begin with.

"Just being able to recall the trip seemed enough, but now that I've had time to think about it and all that occurred, it's more painful than I ever thought possible.

"How can I be sure that I remember all that happened, even now? How can I know that it won't happen again?

"While I was there with you it seemed different. Somehow it didn't matter too much, to have forgotten; but now it does matter. I know it's something that doesn't happen ev - - -

"I can't even recall ——'s color schemes and I know that would probably be the first thing I'd notice.

"My head hurts right on top. It has ever since the day I was down there to see you. I think it must be my eyes — I see little red and green specks — and I'm covered with some kind of rash.

"—— baby please be quiet dear 'ord don't let me lose patience with her she's too sweet and innocent and my self-control"

WHAT DID IT MEAN?

What was the meaning of such a letter? Though unsigned, the familiar penmanship in most of the message revealed plainly that this had been written by Eve White. Had some child found the uncompleted page, scribbled those additional words and, perhaps as a whim, mailed it in an already addressed envelope? Perhaps. The handwriting of the last paragraph certainly suggested the work of a child.

The abrupt change of content surely indicated another's thought. Could Eve White herself, as a puerile prank, have decided to disguise her characteristic handwriting and add this inconsequential note? And if sow, why?

Within a week her husband called requesting another appointment for her without delay. Eve, he said, had gone downtown without consulting him and had bought a great array of expensive clothes. Nothing now seemed to relieve his wife's headaches.

Sitting in the office again, Eve positively denied having sent the letter. She had, she clearly remembered, begun a letter to the physician, but had not finished it. For the new clothes which had so disturbed her husband, she had no explanation.

HER EYES GREW MOIST

"I never saw them, doctor," she said with simple conviction, "until Ralph took me to the closet and showed them to me."

When she had looked in the closet and seen half a dozen luxurious evening gowns, several pairs of shoes, the new coat, the nylon lingerie with lace, and other items, she stepped back aghast.

Telling now of the perplexity, her voice lost its monotonous calm. For the first time her physician saw Eve's eyes grow moist. As if in apology, she mentioned her headache, saying it was now quite severe.

"Doctor," the young woman said, "I am not sure I can tell you . . ." Her unfailing composure was at last broken. Her small hands, lying as usual on the arms of her chair, knotted slowly into tight fists.

HEAR VOICES

"If you hear voices . . . what does it mean . . . ? Oh, no . . . If you really hear it . . . with no one there . . . ?" She sobbed briefly, very quietly. "I know what it means." Her posture tightened. "Madness!" she gasped. "The State Hospital . . ."

Her voice was scarcely audible. Her blue eyes bleached suddenly with terror. "My little Bonnie girl . . ."

Auditory hallucinations are indeed serious. Eve White was not wrong in concluding that they plainly indicate psychosis (mental disease). After a little while she was able to tell more about the dreadful experience.

"For several months," she finally admitted, "I've heard it on rare occasions." During the last few days it had become frequent; now she could not escape it. It was always a woman's voice. Though she could not recognize this voice, at times it seemed somehow familiar. It spoke in a jaunty tone, often using vulgar phrases.

NORMAL REACTIONS

The physician was struck by several points. Psychotic patients who experience auditory hallucinations seldom find the experience alarming in itself. The psychotic schizophrenic almost never regards the hallucinations as an indication of mental disorder.

Eve White's reactions were those of a normal, sane, and healthy person to what, theoretically, could happen only to a person with a grave and malignant psychosis

She returned to the episode of the clothes. Clerks at the stores where she tried to return them had insisted it was she who had bought them. There was perhaps a minute or more of silence.

The brooding look in her eyes became almost a stare. Eve seemed momentarily dazed. Suddenly her posture began to change.

Her body slowly stiffened until she sat rigidly erect. An alien, inexplicable expression then came over her face. This was suddenly erased into utter blankness. The lines of her countenance seemed to shift in a barely visible, slow, rippling transformation.

SHUDDERS, THEN RELAXES

Closing her eyes, she winced as she put her hands to her temples, pressed hard, and twisting them as if to combat sudden pain. A slight shudder passed over her entire body.

Then the hands lightly dropped. She relaxed easily. A pair of blue eyes popped open. There was a quick reckless smile. In a bright unfamiliar voice that sparkled, the woman said, "Hi, there, Doc!"

With a soft and surprisingly intimate syllable of laughter, she crossed her legs carelessly swirling her skirt in the process. She unhurriedly smoothed the hem down over her knees in a manner that was playful and somehow just a little provocative.

The demure and constrained posture of Eve White had melted into buoyant repose. One little foot crossed over the other began a low, small, rhythmic, rocking motion.

FEELS FINE

Still busy with his own unassimulated surprise, the doctor heard himself say, "How do you feel now?"

"Why just fine — never better! How you doing yourself, Doc?"

Eve looked for a moment straight into his eyes. Her expression was that of one who is just barely able to restrain laughter. She tossed her head lightly with a little gesture that threw the fine dark hair forward onto her shoulder. The silence went unbroken for a minute or more.

"She's been having a real rough time. There's no doubt about that," the girl said carelessly. "I feel right sorry for her sometimes. She's such a dope though. What she puts up with from that sorry Ralph White — and all her mooning over the little brat . . . ! To hell with it, I say!"

She leaned forward. "Would you give me a cigarette, please, Doc?"

NOT EVE WHITE

He handed her a cigarette, and then lighting it, said, "Who is 'she'."

"Why, Eve White, of course. Your saintly little patient."

"But aren't you Eve White?" he asked.

"That's for laughs," she exclaimed. She tosed her head slightly again. "Why, you ought to know better than that, Doc!"

Her face was fresh and marvelously free from the habitual signs of care, seriousness, and underlying stress so familiar in the face of the girl who had come into the office. As an impish smile flickered over her childlike face she said softly:

"I know you real well, Doc . . . lots better than she knows you. . . And I kind of like you."

NO HUSBAND

The physician said. "Can you tell me anything more about those dresses that upset your husband so much?"

"I ain't got no husband," she replied promptly and emphatically. "Let's get that straight right now. "She grinned broadly.

"Well, who are you?" he asked incredulously.

"Why, I'm Eve Black," she said (giving Mrs. White's maiden name). "I'm me and she's herself. I like to live and she don't . . .

"Those dresses — well, I can tell you about them. I got out the other day, and I needed some dresses. I like good clothes. So I just went downtown and bought what I wanted. I charged 'em to her husband, too."

She began to laugh, softly. "You ought've seen the look on her silly face when he showed her what was in that closet!"

NEXT WEEK — Eve Black relates some of the strange things that happened when she inhabited Eve White's body. (From the book The Three Faces of Eve, copyright 1957 by Corbett H. Thigpen and Hervey M. Cleckley, and published by McGraw-Hill Book Co., Inc.) Distributed by The Register and Tribune Syndicate.

PREMIER MANNING CHARGES:

Daily Had Correct Info, But Printed Wrong Story

Premier Manning charged in the Alberta legislature that the Edmonton Journal was in a position to correct the statement of a Montreal lawyer and economist before it went to press Saturday, which also appeared in an early Monday edition of the daily paper this week.

Mr. Manning was commenting on a story in the Journal headed: "Editorial In Journal Criticized By Hooke". The editorial had stated that H. Carl Goldenberg of Montreal widely recognized as an authority on municipal fiscal and administration problems, had not written an article which appeared in a government pamphlet with his byline.

The Hon. A. J. Hooke, Minister of Municipal Affairs, had tabled a copy in the legislature of a December, 1957, issue of a magazine, Civic Administration, published in Toronto, which carried an article entitled "Should The Provinces Tax Industries?" under the byline "by H. Carl Goldenberg."

"How much more evidence does The Edmonton Journal need?" asked Mr. Hooke in the legislature.

An "Editor's Note" followed the comments by Mr. Hooke saying that in a telephone call to Mr. Goldenberg, the latter had said he "had never written an article on the subject for Civic Administration and had not been aware previously that such an article had been published."

Mr. Manning said Monday "that he had received a telephone call from Mr. Goldenberg who said that after the Journal had called he had looked in his files and found a copy of Civic Administration and had seen the article. He said it was a condensation of an address he had given before the Canadian Tax Foundation.

The premier explained that the reason Mr. Goldenberg hadn't identified the article when the Journal called was that the magazine editor had given it a different title than the one he had given it.

"Mr. Goldenberg," commented the premier," said he then phoned the Journal and pointed out this."

Mr. Manning added, "I draw to the attention of the legislature that last Saturday morning the Journal had the information and yet the story was published with no correction that he'd called them."

Free Churches To Sponsor Meetings

Four great days of missionary meetings for young and old will be held Thursday to Sunday, Mar. 17. These meetings are being sponsored by the Evangelical Free Churches.

The lands of India, France, West Indies, South America and Africa will be well represented by four missionaries. These missionaries will have with them curios, pictures, films-- colored slides and movies of their respective countries.

Rev. John Teibe will be present having just completed 4½ years in the land of India with the Youth for Christ. Rev. Henry Werner will be here in the interests of the West Indies and South America. Rev. Leslie Crawford, who was a speaker at the Little Egg Lake Bible camp last summer will be speaking and showing pictures of Africa. Miss Mona Sperling will represent children's work in the land of France.

Meetings will be held simultaneously Thursday to Saturday, Mar. 17-19 in the Lac la Biche Evangelical Free Church and in Hylo at 8:00 p.m. Plans are being made to have the Hylo meetings in the Hylo Public school, due to the pictures being shown and the need for electricity.

Sunday, Mar. 20, will be the final day with two great meetings in the Memorial Hall, Lac la Biche. Services at 2:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m.

A fellowship supper will be served between the afternoon and evening meetings. The Beulah Tabernacle Male Quartette from Edmonton will provide special music at both services on the Sunday. Everyone is cordially invited to attend any or all of these services.
